Beaus & Belles

By Mike Sikorsky

Mike Sikorsky has a winter square dance program in Mesa, Arizona, and tours nationally & internationally. Mike is owner/producer of Mesa Apache Productions (MAP) square dance music, and is the author of two books teaching the Activator Stream system of Patter Calling, a system he invented. Mike won the Most Entertaining Caller award at the first Ozzie Awards in April 2011, with over 37,000 votes cast worldwide. Mike is attempting to tour central Florida during the last week of September each year. Any clubs wishing to book Mike should email him at arizonacaller@gmail.com.

After a discussion with the Bow & Swing editor Bill Boyd, this author was requested to write the following article. Before we begin, let's take a look at the primary premise:

Beaus & Belles should be Basic. 4th or 5th night of Beginners class Basic.

Consider for a moment what the benefits would be if Beaus & Belles was taught as a position description, much like Beginners are taught to recognize Lines. When a Partner Trade is taught, dancers are oft times told to pass right shoulders as they pass their partner during the call. In this author's experience, this Partner Trade should pass happens so quickly, the new dancer brain most often does not recognize it as a shoulder pass at all, since it does not remotely resemble a Pass Thru, which is the only Pass call they've been doing thus far in their learning.

Does it not seem possible how Partner Trade could be more easily learned by telling the Beau to always walk around the outside of the Belle as they pass?

Could they also be told the Beau is usually the Boy and the Belle is usually the girl, but not always? Does this not seem to provide the possibility of mild Patter variety at a later date?

Now let's examine why this author believes Beaus & Belles have been relegated to Advanced, and then only from limited positions. Callers have Forever & Forever Amen been teaching Beaus as being the left-handed dancer of each partnership, and the Belle as being the right-hand dancer of each partnership. This description seems to require the dancer to have an out-of-body experience so they can view the square from a helicopter-like perch, much like the caller's vantage point. To this caller's way of thinking, the above is typical caller-think, and it makes Beaus & Belles very difficult to learn.

Try asking the dancers to identify who their current partner is. Then ask them to identify their own right hand. Is your right hand towards your partner? From a normal line facing out, the caller could say "that's YOU, boys. You are the Beaus". From the same line, in the next sentence, the caller could ask the dancers to identify their own left hand. Is your left hand towards your partner? "That's YOU, girls. You are the belles". Then, when teaching Partner Trade, it would be easy to have the dancers turn towards their partner as they turn, having the Beau always walk outside and around the belle.

A few weeks later, it seems it would be fairly simple to call Heads Star Thru, then Outsides Squeeze in between them, a really cool way to call "Spread:" without saying "Spread". Then, after Pass Thru is called, a same-sex partner? Raise your hand. Now the caller can teach Belles Trade, just for workshop variety, telling the dancers to pass right shoulders and both face back in, as they change places. The ending formation is normal right hand Ocean Waves with the boys on the end (the Zero Arrangement), so normal choreo calling would immediately follow.

Several weeks later, after the caller has taught Dixie Style to a Wave, the above "Heads Star Thru & Outsides Squeeze In, then Pass Thru" could be called. Then, have the Beaus Trade this time, putting the dancers in a left hand Ocean Wave with the boys in the center, like the caller just created when he/she taught Dixie Style to a Wave.
